Estero wants own chamber

Doesn't want to be forgotten

By ANDREA STETSON

News-Press staff writer

ESTERO — Fearing Estero will be swallowed up by its neighboring communities, the president of the Koreshan Unity is leading a drive to bring Estero its own chamber of commerce.

Jo Bigelow said the chamber will be operating by the end of summer.

"What we need is to get Estero established and keep it on the map," Bigelow said. "San Carlos is growing south and Bonita is growing north, and we don't want Estero to be forgotten. We've been on the map since 1841."

The Estero Civic Association is supporting the drive to establish a chamber.

"We're for it 100 percent," said association president Eddie Perri.

Perri said the community needs a strong organization to fight for its needs, such as future roads.

"A chamber puts a little bite into it," he said.

Perri said preliminary plans call for a trailer or temporary building on Koreshan property to get the chamber started.

Estero resident Larry Westin said the community needs a chamber so it can be recognized by the business and professional community.

"It's to bring attention to the location," Westin said. "It's a nice place to live and have a business."
